Host of NPR's,
"All Things Considered"

56TH ANNUAL
HAYS PRESS-ENTERPRISE
LECTURE

MONDAY, APRIL 21, 2025

Ari Shapiro is an award-winning anchor of NPR's "All Things Considered," one of the most listened-to radio news programs in the United States, as well as a host of NPR's daily afternoon news podcast, "Consider This."

Ari has reported from above the Arctic Circle and aboard Air Force One. He has covered wars in Iraq, Ukraine, and Israel, and he has filed stories from five continents and most of the 50 states. Before becoming a host, he was NPR's international correspondent based in London. Shapiro took on that role after four years as White House Correspondent during the Obama presidency. In 2012, he embedded with the presidential campaign of Republican Mitt Romney. He was NPR's justice correspondent for five years during the George W. Bush administration.

His work has been consistently recognized by his peers. He has won three national Edward R. Murrow awards. He was named "Journalist of the Year" in 2023 by NLGJA, the association of LGBTQ+ journalists.
